

CALL FOR SPEAKERS

The Coalition for Physician Well-Being's 2023 National Annual conference will feature leading voices on well-being and burnout. The focus is on strategies and breakthrough approaches to enhance well-being and promote a healthier culture for individuals through their healthcare organizations.

We are now accepting speaker proposals for a limited number of general session presentations, breakouts and roundtables that provide original programs with reportable results, review of programs and cutting-edge solutions to further enhance physician well-being. Research on new programs and processes to support organizations during a pandemic (ie: COVID-19) and their impact will be of great interest as we continue to identify best practices.

The Coalition for Physician Well-Being will be interviewing all speakers to ensure alignment. Speaker submissions are required by December 2, 2022.

HOW SPEAKERS ARE SELECTED:

Proposals are reviewed by the Coalition for Physician Well-Being Program Planning Committee. During the proposal review process, the committee will assess potential speakers & conduct interviews. Proposals are evaluated based on the following criteria:
